

How to revise a manuscript already submitted

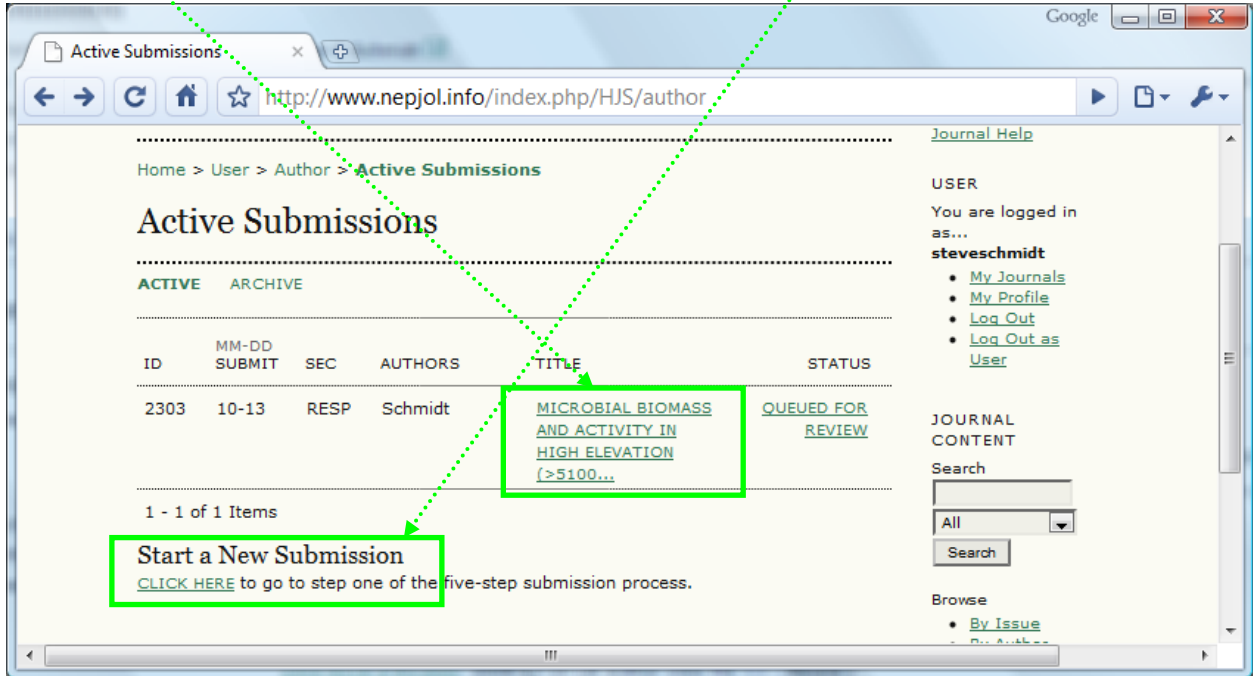

Please log in to your account with the user name you used while submitting the paper the first time. Log in link:

The first page you see will be similar to the following. If your account is does not display Himalayan Journal of Sciences, you may have to click at "My Journals" on the right panel.

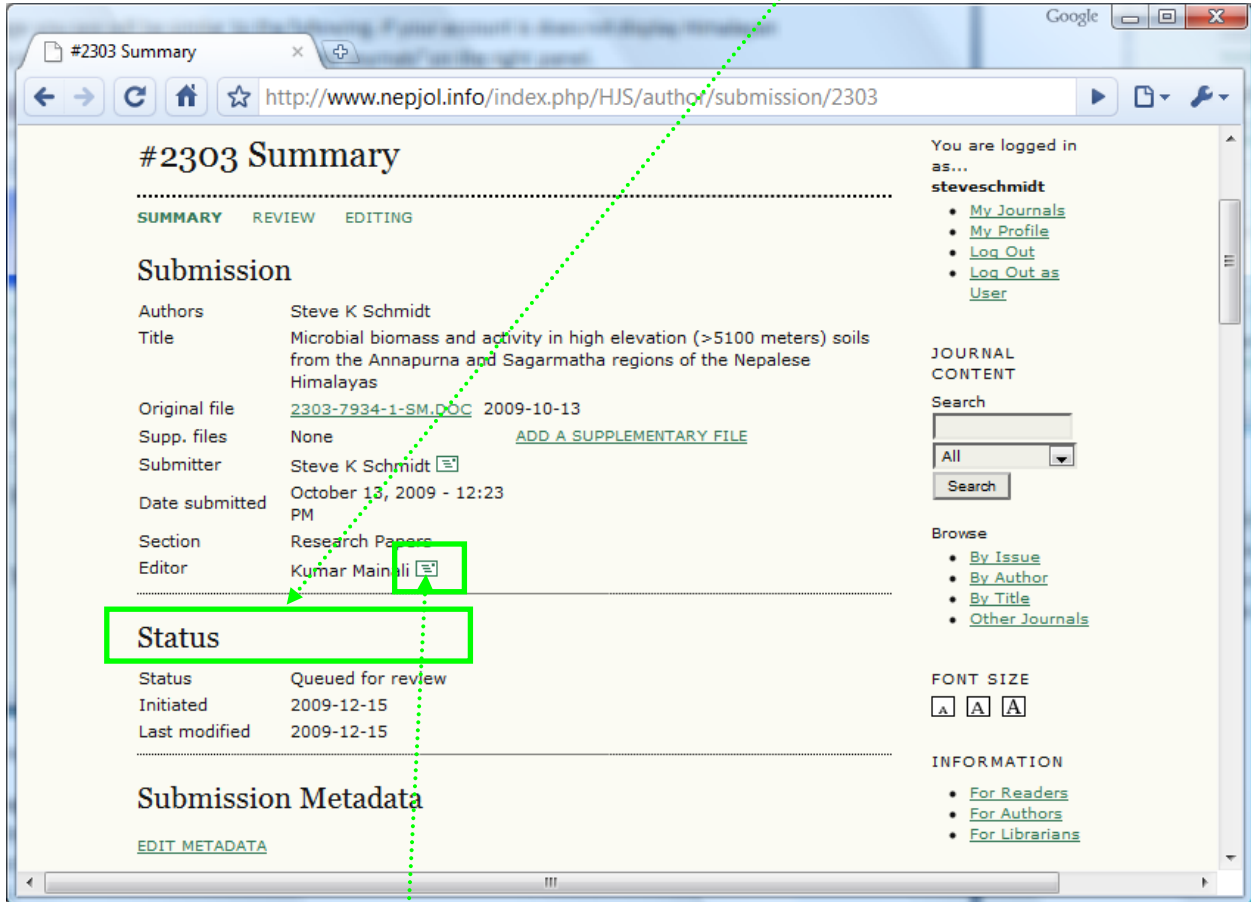

To revise and resubmit your paper, click the link that identifies you as author.

The next page will display all of your active submissions to Himalayan Journal of Sciences. Click on "TITLE" of the submission that you want to work on. You can also initiate a new submission at this page. Please note that a new submission is a new manuscript, not revised version of already submitted manuscript.

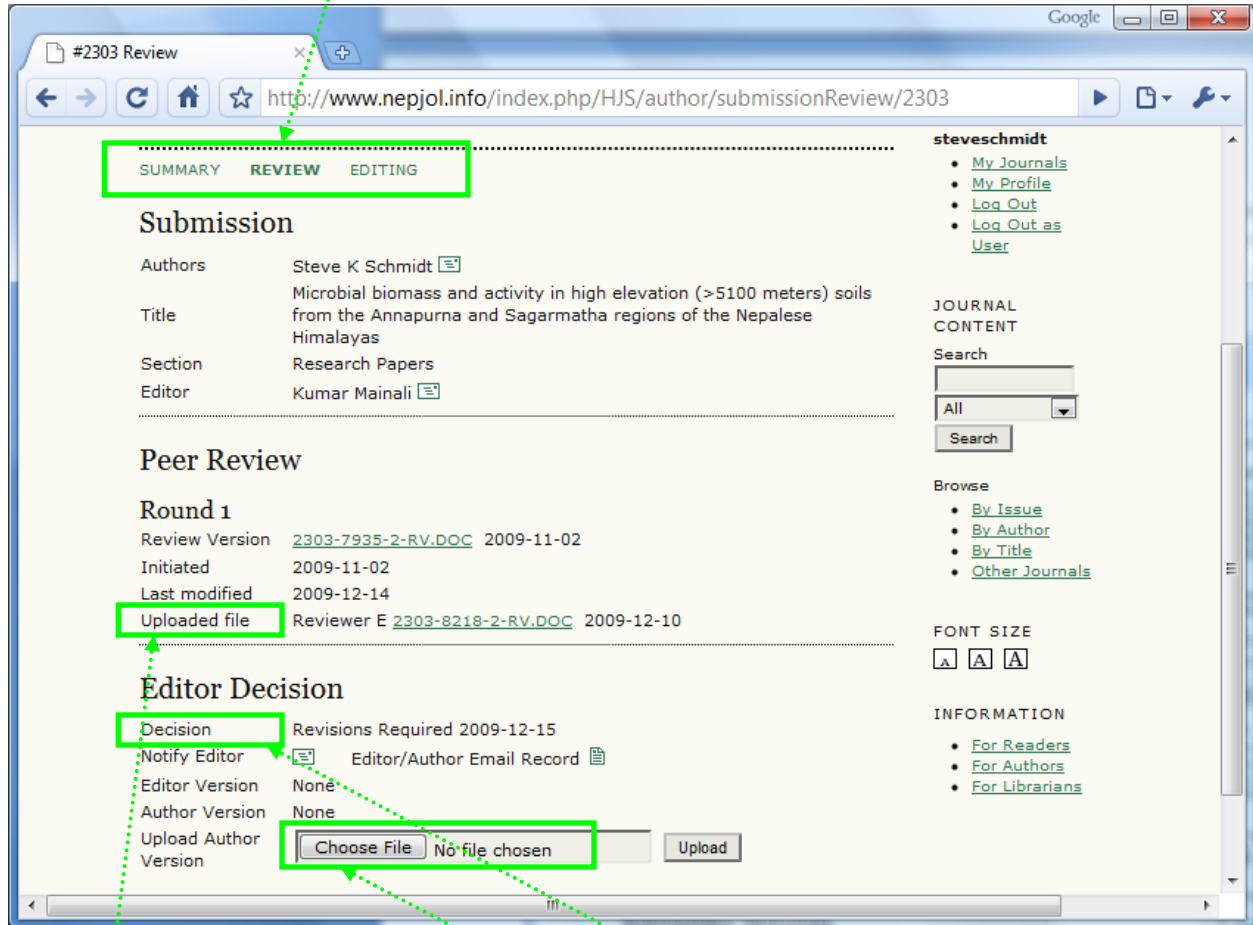

As you see on the screenshot below, the first page of a submission will show you summary. Be careful while playing with the files/attachments because all the reviewed and revised versions of manuscript and all the correspondences are stored in this online account. The “Status” section gives you information on the status of your manuscript.

An author can and should communicate with editors using their online account. For instance, click here to communicate with your section editor. All these correspondences are saved and can be accessed in future.

Remember to check these three tabs at the top. Once a round of review is completed, you will hear from editor about the progress. Clicking "REVIEW" will give you a page similar to the one below.

Review version is the version of your manuscript read by reviewer. Look at the files under "Uploaded file" for the files uploaded by your reviewer, and "Decision" for the action required on your manuscript. A reviewer may have uploaded one or more files. Once you go over all the files uploaded by all of your reviewers, please resubmit your revised manuscript by clicking this link. You can upload one file at a time. To upload more than one file, repeat the process.

Always note that you work on the most recent version of the manuscript. Please do not forget to check the date a file is uploaded.

Editing section will be added later.
